Legalbrief's daily electronic newsletter, Legalbrief Today, is regarded as a must-read publication for law professionals, policy-makers and other players in the legal, policy and regulatory sectors' in South Africa and beyond.

Legalbrief's specialist weekly news services, Legalbrief Environmental, Legalbrief eLaw, Legalbrief Forensic and Legalbrief Workplace, further broaden this reach to other professional interest groups. These include the corporate market; environmental interest groups (consultancies and non-profit organisations); the new media market and high tech companies; accounting, auditing and forensic investigators; all levels of government; tertiary institutions; and, law professionals outside of South Africa.

The Legalbrief website (ranked as as one of South Africa's top 1000 sites) contains archives of individual Legalbrief news articles within a searchable database available to subscribers.

TEXT-BASED ADVERTISING IN LEGALBRIEF NEWSLETTERS

Legalbrief can accommodate text-based adverts in the Legalbrief newsletters that are placed either in the main body of text or in the sidebar of the electronic newsletters.

There are SIX NEWSLETTERS in which placements can be made:

Type of adverts acceptable for the newsletters:

Legalbrief accepts three adverts per position per edition of a newsletter, i.e. a single newsletter edition could at most carry six advertisements, three in the main body of the newsletter and three in the sidebar. Given this limitation we try to ensure that the adverts are going to be relevant to subscribers.

Generally, the best type of advert for the various newsletters are those marketing conferences, seminars, courses or events that would be of interest to our subscribers. Placements that appear in our specialist weekly newsletters could be subject specific. For instance, a conference on climate change would be well-placed in the Legalbrief Environmental newsletter while a seminar on corruption would find the Legalbrief Forensic newsletter to be a good fit.

Employment adverts should be suited to the newsletter. For instance an employment advert for a forensic investigator will be well-placed in the Legalbrief Forensic newsletter. Importantly these adverts can be linked to the full employment placement advertised on the Legalbrief site (see Section 3 for more on this option).

In addition, the newsletter is popularly used to advertise new publications, products and services.

Please note that Legalbrief does not accept advertisements in the newsletters that are purely corporate branding placements. However, these are acceptable for banner advertisements placed on the Legalbrief site. (see Section 2 for more on this option).

2 BANNER ADVERTISING ON THE LEGALBRIEF SITE

The Legalbrief website combines news items from five e-newsletter publications as well as archived editions of the individual newsletters and other information relevant to the subscribers. Each publication has its own homepage as well as separate archive of reports and publications. However, the site's search facility cross-references all the sites.

The Legalbrief Today, Legalbrief Forensic, Legalbrief Environmental, Legalbrief eLaw and Legalbrief Workplace sites offer a combination of open source articles and subscription-based locked content.

The five publications are:

- Legalbrief Today is a daily electronic newsletter that contains executive news summaries of relevant legal developments from South Africa, Africa and beyond.
- Legalbrief Environmental is a weekly newsletter covering environmental, developmental and conservation news.
- Legalbrief eLaw is a weekly news service covering news items related to electronic law and various risks to the enterprise in terms of the use of technology.
- Legalbrief Workplace is a weekly e-newsletter delivered to subscribers each Wednesday morning. The newsletter covers issues relating to labour legislation and case law, and relevant parliamentary news.
- Legalbrief Forensic is a weekly newsletter covering news items related to corruption, fraud and corporate governance.
- Legalbrief Africa is a free weekly e-newsletter delivered to subscribers each Monday. Produced in association with the International Bar Association (IBA), Legalbrief Africa focuses on legal and human rights issues in Africa.

* Advertisements placed in Legalbrief Africa will require prior approval by the sponsor, International Bar Association (IBA).

Legalbrief's visitor base

While a large portion of current Legalbrief subscribers use the site to view archives or search for older articles, site statistics reveal that many users are non-subscribers. A large portion of visitors are from South Africa. However, visitors from the US, UK, the Netherlands, Australia, Canada, Germany, Brazil and New Zealand also feature highly in our web stats. We estimate that half of the visitors are legal professionals and that the rest would be made up of government, non-profit organisations, academics, students and other interested parties.

PLACING AN ORDER

Please note that all advertising is payable in advance on presentation of a pro forma invoice unless advertisers are Juta account holders.

Juta accounts are opened subject to standard credit reference checks and approvals. In the event of non-payment the account holder will be responsible for collection and legal costs incurred and Juta may record the account holder's default with credit bureaus.

Advertising within the Legalbrief newsletters is very popular. Given the limitations on the number of adverts per newsletter, early booking of specific newsletters and dates is recommended.

Advertisers should confirm their requirements telephonically or via email, prior to completion of the order form, to avoid disappointment.

Advertisers must complete the order form for their order to be placed. Advertisers should clearly indicate their payment method (via an existing account, via a new account or pre-payment on presentation of pro forma invoice).

Advertisements placed in Legalbrief Africa will require prior approval by the sponsor, International Bar Association (IBA).

The completed order form, addressed to "Legalbrief Advertising", should be sent via email to: tdavids@juta.co.za
