Africa's Urban Revolution

Editors: S Parnell & E Pieterse

'Africa's Urban Revolution provides a fascinating look, both empirically and theoretically, at an eclectic mix of contemporary urban issues in Africa. Promoting long-term planning that directs and informs African urbanisation is the key message of the authors. This book is a must-read for scholars of the urban South.'

– Professor Ronnie Donaldson, Stellenbosch University

By 2030 African cities will have grown by more than 350 million people and over half the continent's population will be urban. Yet in the minds of policy-makers, scholars and much of the general public, Africa remains a quintessentially rural place. This lack of awareness and robust analysis means it is difficult to make a policy case for a more overtly urban agenda. As a result, there is across the continent insufficient urgency directed to responding to the challenges and opportunities associated with the world's last major wave of urbanisation. Drawing on the expertise of scholars and practitioners associated with UCT's African Centre for Cities, and utilising a diverse array of case studies, Africa's Urban Revolution provides a comprehensive insight into the key issues - demographic, cultural, political, technical, environmental and economic - surrounding African urbanisation.

Recommended for

Academics and scholars of urbanisation and development studies, policy-makers and urban planners.

About the editors

Susan Parnell is an urban geographer in the Department of Environmental and Geographical Sciences at the University of Cape Town (UCT). She is centrally involved in the African Centre for Cities, serving on its executive. Her recent books include A Routledge Handbook on Cities of the Global South (co-edited with S. Community of Insecurity

SADC's Struggle for Peace and Security in Southern Africa

L Nathan

Why have the countries of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) struggled to establish a viable security regime? Why has SADC been unable to engage in successful peacemaking? And why has it defied the optimistic prognosis in the early 1990s that it would build a security community in Southern Africa? Exploring the formation, evolution and effectiveness of the regional security arrangements, Nathan examines a number of vital and troubling questions: He argues that the answers to these questions lie in the absence of common values among member states, the weakness of these states and their unwillingness to surrender sovereignty to the regional organisation. Paradoxically, the challenge of building a co-operative security regime lies more at the national level than at the regional level. The author's perspective is based on a unique mix of insider access, analytical rigour and accessible theory.

Courage of | | Kabbo, The

Celebrating the 100th anniversary of the publication of Specimens of Bushman Folklore

Editors: J Deacon & P Skotnes

The year 2011 marked the centenary of the publication of Wilhelm Bleek and Lucy Lloyd's publication, Specimens of Bushman Folklore, a unique and globally important record of the language and poetry of a now-extinct language, that of the |xam Bushmen. To mark this anniversary, we have published this edited volume, named after | | Kabbo, a prisoner released from the Breakwater Convict Station, who remained in Cape Town far from home and family and sacrificed the freedom of his final years to teach Bleek and Lloyd his language and make his stories known by way of books. The stories in the Bleek and Lloyd archive are now all that remains of the world view of the |xam.

This book brings together a range of experts from a wide array of disciplines but all with a common theme, the Bleek and Lloyd archive, its progenitors and its legacy. It engages with issues of archival research and publication, with the difficulties of understanding oral literature through writing and with the active curation of archives. It comments on the past and present treatment of Bushmen and attempts to keep their culture alive, and it explores the world view of different groups of Bushmen through rock art, the paintings done for Bleek and Lloyd, their poetry and their language.

Flawed Freedom, A

Rethinking Southern African Liberation

J Saul

Twenty years on from the fall of apartheid, veteran analyst and struggle activist John S. Saul examines the liberation struggle in southern Africa. He places it in a regional and global context and looks at how initial optimism and hope has given way to a sense of crisis and dysfunction, exemplified by soaring levels of inequality and violence.

With chapters on South Africa, Tanzania and Mozambique, Saul examines the reality of southern Africa's post-'liberation' plight. He argues that globalisation is fostering in Africa a limited brand of development that offers wealth and power to the fortunate few and a form of recolonisation to the poorer majority. Saul discusses the ongoing 'rebellion of the poor', including the recent Marikana massacre, that continues to shake the region. He suggests that a second southern African liberation struggle is entirely possible in the future.

The book contains a tribute to Ruth First, revolutionary and social scientist, whose tragic end occurred down the hall from Saul's office at the University of Eduardo Mondlane in Maputo; and a salute to Nelson Mandela.

Recommended for

Historians, sociologists, political scientists, students of Development Studies and African Studies, and anyone with an interest in African politics more generally.

About the Author

John Saul is Emeritus Professor of Politics at York University in Toronto, Canada. He is a Canadian political economist and activist whose work has focused on the liberation struggles of southern Africa, from the 1960s to the present. His most recent work includes South Africa – The Present as History – co-written with Patrick Bond (Jacana Media, 2014).

Genocide on Settler Frontiers

When Hunter-gatherers and Commercial Stock Farmers Clash

Editor: M Adhikari

In September 2012, UNESCO held its first ever consultation with member states on the subject of Holocaust and genocide education, recognising the importance of teaching the history of genocide. The aim was to find approaches to raise awareness about the recurrence of mass atrocities and genocide in different environments.

It is in this context that Mohamed Adhikari has put together this title, giving perspective to historical European overseas conquests which included many instances of the extermination of indigenous peoples. In cases where invading commercial stock farmers clashed with hunter-gatherers – in southern Africa, Australia and the Americas – the conflict was particularly destructive, often resulting in a degree of dispossession and slaughter that destroyed the ability of these societies to reproduce themselves biologically or culturally. The question of whether this form of colonial conflict was inherently genocidal has not in any systematic way been addressed by scholars until now.

Recommended for

Academics and students in the fields of genocide studies, European colonialism, indigenous societies, as well as of the various national and regional histories involved. Interested lay readers will find these studies accessible and informative.

About the editor

Mohamed Adhikari is Associate Professor in the Department of Historical Studies at the University of Cape Town. He is the author of several books, most recently The Anatomy of a South African Genocide: The Extermination of the Cape San Peoples (UCT Press, 2010) and Burdened by Race: Coloured Identities in Southern Africa (UCT Press, 2009). He teaches courses on African genocide both at the University of Cape Town and in Stanford University's Bing Overseas Studies Programme.

Hostels, Homes, Museum

Memorialising Migrant Labour Past in Lwandle, South Africa

N Murray & L Witz

During the apartheid years in South Africa, hostels and compounds were built to house migrant labourers. One such hostel compound was Lwandle, some 40 kilometres outside Cape Town. Literally translated from isiXhosa as 'the sea', Lwandle was built in sight of the Atlantic Ocean. Conceptualised as a temporary labour camp, it was laid out by town planners and engineers in the form of diagonal, parallel blocks of barracks around a central open space. The lives of the labourers who lived there were regulated and policed through apartheid legislation around population influx control, the pass system and the policy of Coloured Labour Preference.

In the 1990s, as part of the post-apartheid 'Hostels to Homes' scheme, such hostels were reconfigured and refurbished into homes for family accommodation. A steering committee in Lwandle decided to preserve one dormitory, block 6, hostel 33, as a museum. Officially opened in May 2000, the primary purpose of the Lwandle Migrant Labour Museum was to serve as a reminder of the system of migrant labour, single-sex hostels and the control of workers through that infamous identity document – the pass book.

This book explores the museum's makings, the creation of histories through the oral and the visual and the rehabilitation of structures for the museum, ending with the celebration – and discomfort – of the museum's tenth birthday in 2010. Richly illustrated throughout, the book includes two full colour visual essays by photographers Paul Grendon and Thulani Nxumalo, taken while working with the museum on projects of restoration and collection.

Recommended for

General readers and scholars interested in social history, post-apartheid history, museums, tourism, migrancy, restoration architecture, community development, urban studies and design, public culture and space.

About the authors

Innovation and Intellectual Property: Collaborative dynamics in Africa

Editors: C Armstrong, J De Beer, C Oguamanam, & T Schonwetter

Multinationals, governments, NGOs, academic scholars and civil society groups promote opposing views about how IP protection influences innovation and creativity. One view is that IP protection is inevitably and necessarily an incentive for innovation and creativity. An opposing view is that it is an impediment to free and open exchanges of technology, culture and knowledge, and therefore a stumbling block for innovation which builds on existing works. As a result, entrepreneurs, the law and policy-developers seeking to encourage innovation-oriented entrepreneurial activity face myriad conceptual and practical problems when seeking to design and implement development-oriented IP systems.

This book offers the research findings of the Open African Innovation Research and Training (Open A.I.R.) Project, which focused on increasing empirical evidence at the intersection of innovation, IP and development in Africa. Its case studies cover nine African countries – Egypt, Nigeria, Ghana, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya, Mozambique, Botswana and South Africa – looking at the roles (actual and potential) of IP rights (trademarks, patents, copyrights) in a range of sites of innovation: agricultural production, biofuel technology development, traditional medicine, university/industry research collaborations, automotive manufacturing, independent music production/distribution and scholarly publishing.

The authors, most of whom are acknowledged experts on African IP matters, seek to provide unique contributions to understanding the intersections in Africa among innovation/creativity, IP and development. In addition, this book contributes to further understanding of the concept of 'open development'.

Recommended for

Scholars, researchers and stakeholders in the public and private sectors, in Africa and internationally, who are engaged with matters of innovation, IP rights and socioeconomic development, economics and political science.

In Search of Equality

Women, law and society in Africa

Editors: S Roehrs, D Smythe, A Hsieh & M de Souza

The year 2010 opened the African Women's Decade. For several African countries it also marked 50 years of independence with a new Constitution. Many of them signed international protocols, such as the Protocol on the Rights of Women, which included a promise of gender equality. Now, decades later, what has become of that promise? This is the first publication to critically examine women's rights across several African countries in the light of African constitutional law. It contains the research of eleven authors from nine African countries, combining perspectives from Southern Africa (Namibia, Zimbabwe, Malawi, South Africa), West Africa (Ivory Coast, Nigeria, Cameroon) and East Africa (Rwanda, Uganda) on how to advance women's rights nationally and on the African continent.

Recommended for

Legal professionals across Africa, academics and students in gender, law, human rights and constitutional studies, human rights groups and activists across Africa.

Inside African Politics

P Englebert & K C Dunn

'A comprehensive tour d'horizon of African politics, as well as an incisive review of existing scholarship. Inside African Politics is destined to become a standard reference for teaching and research' – Michael Bratton, Michigan State University

This up-to-date introduction to contemporary African politics focuses on states as well as citizens across the continent, looking at politics from above and below. It examines why we should know about African politics; the evolution of African states; people, identity and power; the practice of power; the range of regimes in Africa; the economic dimensions of African politics; the shifting landscape of conflict and security; and African politics in international relations.

Using an abundance of data and illustrative examples, the authors highlight the contributions of African experiences to the broader knowledge of comparative politics and international relations. The straightforward, accessible style makes this book suitable for the general reader interested in current affairs. But the book will also serve as an essential text and a long-term resource for students and scholars alike.

Recommended for

Undergraduate students of politics, African politics and international relations, as well as the general reader.

About the authors

Pierre Englebert is Professor of Political Science at Pomona College, in the US. He is author of the award-winning Africa: Unity, sovereignty, and sorrow (Lynne Rienner Publishers, 2009) and State legitimacy and development in Africa (Lynne Rienner Publishers, 2002). Kevin C Dunn is Associate professor of political science at Hobard and William Smith Colleges. J.M Coetzee: Two Screenplays

Waiting for the Barbarians and In the Heart of the Country

Editor: H Wittenberg

J.M. Coetzee's screenplay versions of In the Heart of the Country and Waiting for the Barbarians are original and as yet unproduced cinematic adaptations of his novels. Apart from a few early lyric experiments, Coetzee's literary career has almost exclusively been dedicated to prose forms such as the novel, the memoir and the essay, and it is mainly for his accomplishments in novelistic fiction that he has achieved world-wide recognition. For readers familiar with Coetzee's writing career spanning more than 40 years, the screenplays, published for the first time in this volume, are an unusual and unexpected addition to the oeuvre. They show his versatility as a writer able to cross over into the medium of script writing and film, and doing so in a technically proficient and highly accomplished manner.

Academic Herman Wittenberg has written an introduction to this collection, examining the difference in treatment between the screenplays and the novels, as well as Coetzee's relationship with cinema and film-making.

This work is the only one to be produced in 2014 by J. M. Coetzee and will be celebrated at a conference in Adelaide, Australia, to be held in December, focusing on Coetzee's life work.

On Military Culture

Theory, practice and African armed forces

Editors: F Vrej, T Mandrup & A Esterhuysen

African armed forces face many challenges with regard to military professionalism, as the latest coups in Mali and Niger, and the poor performance of the DRC's armed forces, illustrate. And military professionalism is linked to military culture, which is about the collective activities of armed forces, particularly their distinctive practices and collective understanding of shared goals and how to achieve them.

One of the reasons for their flawed performance is that Africa's different military cultures are at a formative stage. But how do we understand and reconcile them when discussion of military culture largely occurs from a Western perspective? This book offers a contemporary view of military culture within Africa, with contributions from scholars and practitioners from Africa, as well as North America, Europe and Australia.

It first focuses on the theory of military culture, the implications for civil-military relations, and the role of the armed forces in society. It then presents a number of cases, from Ethiopia, Kenya and Namibia as well as Australia and Canada. Thirdly, the book discusses the South African military, with a retrospective view of its military culture and an examination of its post-apartheid vision. The underlying argument of this book is that African armed forces need to come to terms with the elements of military culture if they want to become more professional as an instrument of war and in their purpose of serving society.

Private Law and Human Rights

Bringing rights home in Scotland and South Africa

Editors: E Reid & D Visser

Scotland and South Africa are mixed jurisdictions, combining features of common law and civil law traditions. Over the last decade a shared feature in both Scotland and South Africa has been a new and intense focus on human rights. In Scotland, the European Convention on Human Rights now constitutes an important element in the foundation of all domestic law. Similarly, the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, adopted in 1996, has as its cornerstone a Bill of Rights that binds not only the legislature, the executive, the judiciary and all organs of state, but also private parties. Of course, the 'constitutional moments' from which these documents sprang were very different and the Scottish and South African experience in some aspects could not be more dissimilar. Yet in many respects the parallels are close and compelling. This book, written by experts from both jurisdictions, examines exactly how human-rights provisions influence private law, looking at all branches of the subject. Moreover, it gives a unique perspective by comparing the approach in these kindred legal systems, thus providing a benchmark for both.

Recommended for

Academics and judges interested in constitutional law as well as private law; practitioners who have to solve problems regarding the relevance and role of human rights in regard to different private-law situations.

About the editors

She has written extensively on the law of delict from a comparative perspective. Danie Visser is Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Research) and Professor of Private Law at the University of Cape Town. His main work has been in the law of unjustified enrichment, comparative law and legal history. His research has helped to foster an understanding of how legal systems that combine English and European civil law (such as Scottish and South African law) can contribute to legal development in the rest of the world.

Sharing Benefits From the Coast

Rights, resources and livelihoods

Editors: R Wynberg & M Hauck

Coastal resources are vital for communities in developing countries, many of whom live in abject poverty. These resources also hold significant value for a number of different sectors of the economy, such as mining, fisheries, forestry and tourism, many of which supply expanding global consumer markets. Although these activities provide opportunities for economic and income growth, global patterns indicate growing levels of economic inequality between custodians of these resources and those exploiting them, as well as an increasing incidence in absolute levels of poverty. 'Benefit-sharing' has emerged as a popular term to describe interventions to redress inequalities, and thus alleviate poverty.

Drawing from empirical research in coastal communities across South Africa and Mozambique, this book provides cutting-edge analyses of and new conceptual approaches to these issues. It aims to enhance an understanding of why benefits are distributed in the way they are, the main blockages preventing greater equity, and strategies for more equitable benefit-sharing. The findings have relevance and application for coastal livelihoods, rural governance and resource sustainability, not only in these countries but across the world in a context where community rights are increasingly undermined by land-grabbing, unequal power relations and externally driven development interventions.

Viewpoints

The University of Cape Town and its treasures

The University of Cape Town, South Africa's oldest university, celebrates its treasures in this glossy, gorgeous book, itself a beautiful object for those who attended the university either as students or staff. This institution's treasures lie in its architecture, its landscape, its students, its works of art, its archives and collections, and its famous moments, all of which are richly portrayed in photographs and descriptive text. Rated as one of the most beautiful universities in the world, and the best university in Africa, it has reason to boast.

Business of Social Innovation, The

Exploring new frontiers in Africa

Editor: R Hamann

The role of business in developing innovative responses to complex social and environmental problems is becoming more urgent and more popular. As national and multilateral efforts in meeting some of the Millennium Development Goals or addressing climate change and resource degradation make only limited progress, increasing attention is paid to harnessing the entrepreneurial, innovative, managerial and financial capacities of business, at various scales, for improved social and environmental outcomes. A more proactive role for business in sustainable development is especially pertinent in sub-Saharan Africa. Traditional business models aimed purely at economic growth will not suffice, however, to tackle the amplitude of social and environmental challenges lying ahead.

In Africa there are manifold examples of home-grown social (and environmental) innovations in IT services, mobile technology, banking, microcredit, agriculture and nature conservation – most of which have received little or no attention from research.

This book seeks to contribute to the growing scholarly work on social and environmental innovation with the two-fold aim of studying the role of business in creating such innovation and applying the analysis to the African context.

Recommended for

Academics and scholars from different disciplines who deal with matters of innovation in the face of complex social and environmental challenges; researchers from management, organisation, innovation, entrepreneurship and development studies.

Comparative Perspectives on the Right to Food Security

New directions in social and economic policy

Editors: S Fukuda-Parr & V Taylor

The right to food is guaranteed in South Africa's Constitution as it is in international law. Yet food insecurity remains widespread and persistent, at levels much higher than in countries with similar levels of per capita GDP and development, such as Brazil.

In this book, leading local and international researchers on food security and related policy work have come together to create the first systematic and trans-disciplinary analysis of food security and its multiple dimensions in South Africa and the southern African region. Drawing on Amartya Sen's entitlement theory to identify the key drivers of hunger they see food insecurity as a chronic, structurally based condition rather than only resulting from natural environmental disasters, temporary economic shocks and household vulnerabilities. The authors focus on a range of policy options and choices to provide short-term and longer-term solutions to the systemic causes of unemployment, failing rural livelihoods and traditional subsistence production. They also emphasise the linkages between the social and economic dimensions of food insecurity and use an integrative, interdisciplinary approach to analyse the reasons why these conditions persist and what can be done to address them.

Importantly the book brings together work undertaken at local and national levels in new ways so that policy makers, researchers, human rights advocates and social and economic scholars are better able to make the links between macro- and micro- processes of development.

From Man to Man; or Perhaps, Only

O Schreiner (edited by Dorothy Driver)

South Africa's first novelist, Olive Schreiner, is perhaps most famous for her work The Story of an African Farm (1883), which is widely read and taught. Her last book, From Man to Man (1926), now out of print, is arguably more important and relevant, not only because it is a more mature study of early racial and imperial relations but also because of its more modern characterisation. It is the story of two white women brought up in the Cape of Good Hope at the end of the 19th century. One marries and has children, the other is led into a life of prostitution. Asking questions about the relation between marriage and prostitution in a world where women are valued only for their bodies, the novel portrays one woman's struggle to re-create herself and to educate her children, including her black foster-child, in such a way as to enable them to pursue a more humane and fulfilled destiny than was open to her. This powerful novel, in advance of its time, is about the human capacity to dream of a society no longer regulated by damaging racial and gender relations.

The previous edition of this work was edited and completed posthumously by Schreiner's husband. This new edition, edited by Prof Dorothy Driver, renowned academic, editor, and literary critic, who believes that Cronwright-Schreiner misread the author's intention, adds another ending, written by Schreiner in her own words in a letter to a friend. She also repairs the editorial and proofreading errors introduced by Cronwright-Schreiner. An introduction by Driver, and appendices which include Cronwright-Schreiner's ending, notes on the genesis of the text, and a glossary of South African terms, clarify and add to the value of this 'unfinished novel', cited as 'the best writing (Schreiner) ever did'.

Great Dance, The

Myth and identity in documentary films on the Bushmen

L. Van Vuuren

The use of film as a source for historical research is relatively well established. Since the 1980s, historians have studied the power of the cinema to generate historical consciousness. Between 1925 and 2000 many documentary films were made about the Bushmen people of southern Africa. This book is the first study of this film genre - 'Bushmanology'. The author brings together two areas of important scholarship: the use of film as a source for the writing of history, and the history and mythologising of hunter-gatherer societies in southern Africa.

Critiquing several film 'visualisations' of Bushman cultures, all feature documentary films aimed at international distribution for a general audience, the author shows how these documentaries have framed the Bushmen as mythically pristine hunter-gatherers, to varying degrees. Whether reinforcing or challenging the myth of pristine Bushmen, these films reflect changing racial discourses, perceptions of the African environment and landscape by the West, theoretical debates, changing approaches to anthropology and history on film, and the changing significance of aboriginal people in nation states. It is argued here that the status of the documentary film as more truthful, more investigative, than fiction film requires careful analysis by historians, and that understanding the power of film to define perceptions of indigenous peoples is an important step in defending and defining the place of such groups in our increasingly globalised world.

Greening the South African Economy

Editors: M Swilling, J Kaviti Musango & J Wakeford

The depletion of South Africa's (and in some cases the world's) natural resources and the degradation of environmental sinks (including the atmosphere, lakes and rivers, and land) are continuing at such a rate that natural resource prices are climbing and many critical ecosystem services that underpin human welfare are increasingly threatened.

The concept of the 'green economy' has gained increasing traction in South African policy discourses over the past few years. However, in much of this discourse it is viewed in a piecemeal way as one part or sector of the economy (e.g. an industrial sector dealing with manufacture and installation of renewable energy technologies and energy-efficient equipment and appliances). In the view of the authors, 'greening the South African economy' requires an application of sustainability principles and practices across the full range of primary, secondary and tertiary sectors of the economy in an integrated manner. The aim of this book is therefore to apply principles of sustainability and 'green economics' to the entire South African socio-economic system and its major elements in an integrated and comprehensive manner.

Recommended for

Economists, academics, students and policy-makers with an interest in sustainable development and green futures in South Africa and similar developing countries.

Growing the Next Generation of Researchers

A handbook for emerging researchers and their mentors

Editor: L Holness

This book arises out of the work of the Emerging Researcher Programme at the University of Cape Town and builds on the publication entitled The Emerging Researcher: Nurturing passion, developing skills, producing output, co-authored by John W. de Gruchy and Lyn Holness (UCT Press, 2007). Designed as a tool for emerging researchers and their mentors, this new volume provides strategies for research growth in areas such as understanding the relationship between teaching and research; obtaining higher degrees; producing peer-reviewed research output; generating and managing research funding; effective research planning; engaging in interdisciplinary research; and postgraduate supervision.

The book will have relevance for those across the spectrum denoted by the term 'emerging' – from those new to academia to those whose development as researchers has for some reason been thwarted, and those who are approaching the stage of being recognised as established researchers.

In response to the demand for the first book from researchers in the broader African context, the new book takes into account topics and challenges that are relevant across the sub-Saharan continent.

Recommended for

Emerging researchers, academics in universities, mentors and research policy-makers in Africa and other developing markets.

About the editor

Lyn Holness was Cluster Manager for Research Development and Manager of the Emerging Researcher Programme at the University of Cape Town until 2009.

Homeless Wanderers

Movement and mental illness in the Cape Colony in the late 19th century

S Swartz

There are a number of studies describing colonial lunatic asylums, and more broadly, colonial psychiatry and its operation in Africa. This monograph breaks new ground in tracing the route of people thought to be 'of unsound mind' from their homes and families to eventual committal to a lunatic asylum in the Cape Colony in the late nineteenth century.

The central concern is with the complex interface between lunacy legislation, colonial government, families and communities, and the ways in which these aspects affected individuals' experiences of treatment both before and after committal to a lunatic asylum. A theme linking each chapter is the movement of the insane: in and out of gaols, asylums and families; in and out of the colony by land or sea; and journeys by ship, cart, train or horse in search of care.

The management of the insane in the Cape Colony, and the legal and medical institutions with primary responsibility for delivering humane care to this intensely vulnerable group, gives a unique perspective on the operation of colonialism itself.

Infant and Child Development in Africa

The current state of the field

Editors: M Tomlinson & A Sameroff

While 90% of the 135 million infants born in the world each year live in low-income or developing countries, in a recent survey only 4% of the articles in 12 major international infancy and developmental journals were found to address the experience of infants living in the developing world. Yet, in conditions of extreme poverty and instability, conditions characteristic of Africa, the pressures on parents differ markedly from those facing parents in communities that are typically the focus of research in child development. The dearth of literature in this area is now addressed in this timely book.

This volume offers a broad, contextualised understanding of the factors that impact upon infant and child development in Africa. It is Africa-wide in its scope, with case studies in Uganda, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Kenya, Nigeria, Malawi and South Africa.

Recommended for

Academics and practitioners in psychology, including developmental psychology, child clinical psychology, developmental psychopathology, psychiatry, human ecology, and those in schools of education. It will also be of interest to nurses and paediatricians, health workers and for those interested in early childhood development.

He is perhaps the pre-eminent world leader in the field of infant and child development.

Outposts of Progress

Joseph Conrad, Modernism and (Post)colonialism

Editors: G Fincham, J Hawthorn & J Lothe

The first international conference on the works of Joseph Conrad ever held in Africa took place in 1998, to mark the centenary of the publication of Heart of Darkness. This book draws its title from Conrad's short story, 'An Outpost of Progress' which represented the responses of a European to settled European assumptions about progress and backwardness, in the light of his first-hand experience of what Europeans were doing in Africa at the end of the nineteenth century. The 13 essays in this collection engage directly with the ways in which Conrad's fiction explores and problematises the notion of 'progress', not only at the time when he was writing but now, more than a century later.

The relationship between modernist and postcolonial literature has been theorised by critics in Britain, Europe and America since the late 1980s. For the first time, in this book, these debates move to Africa.

Recommended for

General readers and scholars interested in Conrad and postcolonial literature.

Rape Unresolved

Victims and police responses in South Africa

D Smythe

Of the approximately 50 000 rape cases reported in South Africa every year, 30 000–35 000 simply disappear. The majority are closed by the police: case withdrawn, undetected, unfounded. Prosecutors decline to prosecute approximately half those referred to them. Of the remainder that are prosecuted, around 40% result in conviction. This translates into an overall conviction rate of 4-8% of reported cases. Through a detailed qualitative review of rape dockets the author provides novel insights into police responses to rape. A key insight from the study is that while stereotypes certainly abound, it is in the process of investigating rape cases that things fall apart. The book shines new light on complainant withdrawals, false rape complaints and police responses to rape.

Recommended for

Local and international academics concerned with policing and gender-based violence, policy-makers working on improving criminal justice responses to rape; readers interested in understanding the failure of the criminal justice system to deal with rape.

Season of Rebirth, A

African renaissance and the Afro-Arab Spring

Editors: C Villa-Vicencio & E Doxtader

The hope and despair surrounding the Afro-Arab Spring in North African countries have only just begun to be played out in regional and global politics. Similarly, the call for an African renaissance that followed what has been called a 'miraculous' negotiated political transition in South Africa is, 20 years later, viewed with ambiguity.

It is clear is that current developments in Africa – North and South – promise something markedly different to what has prevailed at any point since the dawn of the African independence movements in the 1950s. This inspires the suggestion that these developments are reminiscent of the 'European moment' in 1989 that saw the fall of the Berlin Wall. Countries such as Mali, the Central African Republic, Cote d'Ivoire, Somalia and Zimbabwe are experiencing turbulence every bit as challenging at those in the Afro-Arab countries and South Africa.

This book specifically identifies and assesses lessons learned and insights gained from the South African transition and considers whether these lessons and insights have any significance for Arab Spring countries. In turn, current protests and emerging threats to democracy in the Arab Spring countries are highlighted as realities which South Africa would do well to ponder.

Recommended for

Academics, scholars and the general reader interested in African Studies, International Relations and current affairs on the African continent.

Towards Employment-Intensive Growth in South Africa

Editor: A Black

South Africa's high rate of unemployment (25%) makes it a complete outlier compared with other middle-income countries. Indeed, the unemployment rate rises to 33% if discouraged workers are taken into account. The exceptionally high rate of unemployment underpins extreme poverty and inequality and is a major contributor to social dislocation. If it were not for increased social payments, poverty would have continued to increase since the advent of democracy in 1994. Unemployment also represents a huge cost to growth.

The objective of this book is to focus on the growth path of the economy. The starting point is that while more rapid economic expansion is an important objective, at any given level of growth, the economy as a whole needs to become more labour-absorbing. The central question posed is how to bring about changes in the economic structure and pattern of development, which would lead to the attainment of this objective.

The authors argue that employment needs to be much more centrally positioned within the economic and social policy arena. They emphasise innovative approaches within a broader focus on the growth path, and employment-intensive growth. And they posit that the negative impact of previous 'distortions' requires much more than a levelling of the playing field via market-based reforms. Apart from presenting an alternative growth path which could start to shift the economy in new directions, the book tackles themes which have received only limited attention, such as wage subsidies, youth unemployment and employment growth in rural areas.

Upgrading Informal Settlements in South Africa

Pursuing a partnership-based approach

Editors: L Cirolia, M van Donk, W Smit & S Drimie

At the end of apartheid the South African state launched a large-scale Reconstruction and Development Programme (RDP) which included the provision of 'free housing' to the poor – commonly known as 'RDP housing'. There is overwhelming evidence that this programme has largely failed and the idea of upgrading informal settlements rather than eradicating them has slowly gained traction in South Africa.

A more incremental and participatory housing delivery model is necessary, using a more plural, responsive and adaptive approach which responds to the challenges of the informal city. A range of innovative upgrading practices are emerging, among them partnerships between NGOs, local municipalities and communities to address upgrading challenges. This book captures the current successes and challenges of informal settlement upgrading initiatives in South Africa and seeks to inspire sustainable and transformative upgrading practice.

Victoria Mxenge Housing Project, The

Building houses and communities through social activism and pedagogy

S Ismail

At the beginning of South Africa's democratic change in 1994, a group of 30 women who lived in shacks on the barren outskirts of Cape Town started the Victoria Mxenge Housing Project. This once-desolate piece of land is now a thriving, sustainable community of more than 5 000 houses.

Through the stories of these women, the author describes how they became their own providers in a context where the state did not live up to its social responsibilities. She presents the value of 'citizen learning' in the developing world and highlights the importance of local and traditional knowledge, experiential learning, and learning in an informal context. This book taps into the growing international interest in social learning in the context of social movements.

Unbearable Whiteness of Being, The

Farmers' voices from Zimbabwe

R Pilosof

The history of colonial land alienation, the grievances fuelling the liberation war, and post-independence land reforms have all been grist to the mill of recent scholarship on Zimbabwe. Yet for all the attention the country's white farmers have received from academics and journalists, the fact that they themselves have played a dynamic role in cataloguing and representing their own affairs has gone unremarked. It is this crucial dimension that Rory Pilosof explores in The Unbearable Whiteness of Being. His examination of farmers' voices – in The Farmer magazine, in memoirs, and in recent interviews – reveals continuities as well as breaks in their relationships with land, belonging and race. This book helps to explain why many of the events in the countryside unfolded in the ways they did.

Steward Leadership

A maturational perspective

K April, J Kukard & K Peters

Steward leadership is a form of leadership that focuses on others, the community and society at large, rather than the self. The authors of Steward Leadership: a maturational perspective, who teach MBA courses around the world, have created a framework for stewardship and its requisite behavior, based on nine stewardship attributes: personal vision, personal mastery, vulnerability and maturity, risk-taking and experimentation, mentoring, raising awareness, shared vision, valuing diversity, and delivering results. In this book they provide the theoretical and consulting tools with which organisations can develop stewards, whether through training programmes, mentoring programmes, coaching initiatives and/or personal development practices.

Just Transitions

Explorations of sustainability in an unfair world

M Swilling & E Annecke

Current economic growth strategies around the world are rapidly depleting natural resources and eco-systems. Just Transitions provides an overview of these challenges from a global South perspective. How do developing countries eradicate poverty via economic development while encountering the consequences of global warming and dwindling supplies of clean water, productive soils, cheap oil, minerals and other resources? This book considers a just transition which reconciles the sustainable use of nature resources with a pervasive commitment to sufficiency (where over-consumers are satisfied with less so that under-consumers can secure enough). Case studies drawn from Africa detail the challenges, but they are set in the context of global trends. The authors conclude with their experience of building a community that aspires to live sustainably.

M Jerven

Existing data on income and growth in sub-Saharan African countries is unreliable, even seriously misleading. The author provides the first systematic analysis of the level, direction and causes of the errors, looking at a range of African countries, from Benin to Zambia. Jerven's research suggests that data supplied by national records and statistical offices substantially misstate the actual situation. As a result, scarce economic aid is misapplied, policymakers' attempts to improve their citizens' lives are frustrated, and donors have no accurate sense of the impact of their aid. Jerven explains what can and should be done to improve the guidelines for both the production and use of statistics.

Construction item pricing

For more profit and less risk

D Cattell

The pricing of the constituent component items of a project has a substantial influence on the profitability of a project for a building contractor. Despite this, there has been relatively little research done on this subject since 'unbalanced bidding' (the manipulation of component item prices) was identified as a viable strategy 50 years ago. This book outlines a new approach, called CUP Theory (Construction Unit Pricing Theory), which is intended to lay a new foundation for a scientifically based approach to item pricing. It shows that contractors could increase their profit by as much as 150% without much change to their risk. The author has included a CD containing the program by which pricing can be calculated, and has presented it so that it can be further worked on by those researching the field.

Sex, Genes and Rock 'n' Roll

How evolution has shaped the modern world

R Brooks

Why are people getting fatter? Why do so many rock stars end up dead at 27? Is there any hope of curbing population growth, rampant consumerism and the environmental devastation they wreak? Evolutionary biologist Rob Brooks argues that the origins of these twenty-first century problems can be found where the ancient forces of evolution collide with modern culture and economics. In Sex, Genes and Rock 'n' Roll Brooks illustrates how evolution stands alongside economics, anthropology, psychology and political science in shaping our world, and affects important aspects of our life, from falling in love to making music, our obsession with rock 'n' roll, sexual conflict, fertility, obesity, consumption, ageing and more.

Transforming the frontier

Peace parks and the politics of neoliberal conservation in southern Africa

B Büscher

In Transforming the Frontier Bram Büscher questions why peace parks - large areas that protect biodiversity while stimulating international development through ecotourism - have become such a popular conservation model. Drawing from extensive fieldwork in the Maloti-Drakensberg Transfrontier Conservation and Development Project (MDTP), Büscher looks how transfrontier conservation has become an integral mechanism of neoliberal political economies. He argues that the grandiose diplomatic presumptions of peace park initiatives and community-based conservation efforts fail to take into account the limited resources and leadership of local groups, as well as the complexities of everyday life that inhibit the implementation of this 'global solution'.

Jacketed Women

Qualitative research methodologies on sexualities and gender in Africa

Editors: J Bennett & C Pereira

This book explores a research methodology suited to carrying out in-depth case studies of the dynamics of gender and contemporary sexual cultures in Africa. The chapters cover broad-ranging issues and include questions about what it means to research topics that are unpopular or fraught with the sense of the taboo that underpins much work in sexualities and gender studies. Overall, the diverse pieces within the collection offer the opportunity to see qualitative research not as the 'poor cousin' of quantitative studies but as a zone which raises intellectual and political challenges.

Sufi Narratives of Intimacy

Ibn 'Arabi, Gender, and Sexuality

S Shaikh

Thirteenth-century Sufi poet, mystic and legal scholar Muhyi al-Din ibn al-'Arabi wrote much on gender as integral to questions of human existence and moral personhood. Reading his works through a critical feminist lens, Sa'diyya Shaikh opens fertile spaces in which new and creative encounters with gender justice in Islam can take place. Grounding her work in Islamic epistemology, Shaikh attends to the ways in which Sufi metaphysics and theology might allow for fundamental shifts in Islamic gender ethics and legal formulations, addressing wide-ranging contemporary challenges, including questions of women's rights in marriage and divorce, the politics of veiling and women's leadership of ritual prayer.

Rethinking Aging

Growing old and living well in an overtreated society

N Hadler

Although aging and dying are not diseases, older citizens are subject to the most egregious marketing in the name of 'successful aging' and 'long life', as if both are commodities. In Rethinking Aging, Nortin M. Hadler examines health-care choices offered to aging individuals and argues that too often the choices serve to profit the provider rather than benefit the recipient, leading to the medicalisation of everyday ailments and blatant overtreatment. Rethinking Aging forewarns and arms readers with evidence-based insights that facilitate health-promoting decision-making.

Imagining the Cape Colony

History, Literature, and the South African Nation

D Johnson

Imagining the Cape Colony revisits a key phase of South African history – the period 1770-1830, when the American Revolution of 1776 and the French Revolution of 1789 produced the most influential forms of the modern nation state. The book addresses current debates in postcolonial studies about settler nationalism, anti-colonial resistance and the imprint of 18th-century colonial histories on contemporary neo-colonial politics through the lens of writers of the time, such as François Levaillant and Lady Anne Barnard, and figures on the margins of colonial history, like settler rebels, slaves and early African nationalists. The book also looks at imaginings of the post-apartheid South African nation and how they influence readings of the 18th-century history of the Cape Colony, with extensive commentaries on literature and history associated with the Thabo Mbeki presidency given particular attention.

Rural Resistance in South Africa

The Mpondo Revolts after Fifty Years

Editors: L Ntsebeza & T Kepe

Much has been written about anti-apartheid resistance by the marginalised people of South Africa, as well as its violent repression by security forces in urban areas (such as the Sharpeville massacre and the Soweto riots). But very little attention has been paid to resistance by rural people. The Mpondo Revolts, which began in the 1950s and reached a climax in 1960, rank among the most significant rural resistances in South Africa. During this period Mpondo villagers emphatically rejected the introduction of Bantu Authorities and unpopular rural land-use planning that meant loss of land, and many lost their lives as a result. This volume presents a fresh understanding of the uprising as well as its meaning and significance then and now, particularly relating to land, rural governance, party politics and the agency of the marginalised.

Southern African Liberation Struggles

New local, regional and global perspectives

Editors: H Sapire & C Saunders

The writing of critical, reflective histories of southern African liberation movements is still in its infancy. Unlike the many hagiographic, justificatory or partisan accounts that have been published, this collection of essays examines the fissures and tensions that existed within them and seeks to present nuanced accounts of the international solidarity movements that flourished alongside the southern African liberation and exile movements. This collection of essays illustrates the intertwined histories of southern African liberation struggles and international solidarity movements from the 1960s to 1994, reflecting the new directions taken by local scholars and those writing from abroad.

Thomas Pringle

South African pioneer, poet and abolitionist

R Vigne

This biography of Thomas Pringle (1789-1834), poet, fighter for the Cape Colony's settler's rights, and abolitionist, reveals for the first time the role this key Enlightenment figure played in Africa and Britain. He was honoured in South Africa as the 'father of South African poetry' in English, for initiating a free press, as a fighter for the democratic rights of the Cape Colony settlers, the liberation of the Khoisan people, and as a champion of the increasingly dispossessed Nguni on the eastern frontier.

Accountable Government in Africa

Perspectives from public law and political studies

Editors: D Chirwa & L Nijzink

In the early 1990s, a wave of democratisation swept the African continent, resulting in a flurry of constitution-making and constitutional revision. Two decades later leading experts in the fields of public law, political science and democratisation studies assess to what extent accountable governance has taken root in Africa. This book presents new knowledge about legal and political developments in a number of African countries — Ghana, Malawi, Mali, South Africa, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia, with further references to Mozambique, Kenya and Swaziland — bringing the policy goal of developing and deepening democratic governance and accountable government on the continent up to date.

Falls the Shadow

Between the promise and the reality of the South African Constitution

Editors: K Bentley L Nathan & R Calland

South Africa supposedly has one of the best Constitutions in the world, one which is intended to control and constrain the exercise of power by the state so that it does not threaten the liberty and security of citizens. But, in reality, does the Constitution contribute more to the security of some groups than others? Does it help to ensure certain types of security but not others? And does it have greater impact on some institutions than others? This book describes how the Constitution has a significant impact on the security of South African citizens and communities but that this impact is differential. The chapters in the book explain what accounts for the differences, examine the consequences of the different impacts and consider whether there are any general observations and hypotheses that emerge from comparative perspectives.

Nadine Gordimer

Weaving together fiction, women and politics

D Brahim

Translated by V Everson & C Shapiro

Denise Brahim's literary critique of the works of Nadine Gordimer (Nadine Gordimer: La femme, la politique, le roman. 2000) is the most sought after of her books. Brahim is a French intellectual known particularly for her scholarship on contemporary African women writers. For the first time, this translation gives an Anglophone readership insights into her perspective on the works of the Nobel Prize winner, which reflect the changing nature of South African society and document the struggle during the apartheid regime, the process of political transformation and post-democratic South African society.

Food for Africa

The life and work of a scientist in GM crops

J Thomson

In Food for Africa, Jennifer Thomson traces through anecdote and science the development of a hotly contended area of research, from the dawn of genetic engineering in the USA in 1974, through the early stages of its uptake in South Africa to the current situation in which approximately 80% of maize in South Africa is genetically modified for drought resistance. Through her own story of how she came to choose GM as a career and her path-breaking involvement in the development of GM research, she describes the spread of this technology into other parts of Africa to develop crops resistant to drought, insects and viruses. The book describes a remarkable personal and scientific evolution and looks to a future in which staple crops may be grown in difficult conditions by smallholder farmers and help Africans achieve food security.

Friend or Foe?

Dominant party systems in southern Africa

Editors: N de Jager & P du Toit

Within Southern Africa, there is an observable increase in dominant party systems, in which one political party dominates over a prolonged period of time, within a democratic system with regular elections. This party system has replaced the one-party system that dominated Africa's political landscape after the first wave of liberations in the 1950s and 1960s. This book seeks to understand this trend and its implications for southern Africa's democracies by comparing such systems in southern Africa with others in the developing world (such as India, South Korea and Taiwan). In particular, the case of Zimbabwe stands out as a concerning example of the direction a dominant party can take: regression into authoritarianism. India, South Korea and Taiwan present alternative routes for the dominant party system. The salient question posed by this book is: Which route are Botswana, Namibia and South Africa taking? It answers by drawing conclusions to determine whether these countries are moving towards liberal democracy, authoritarianism or a road in between.

Post-conflict Reconstruction and Development in Africa

Concepts, role-players, policy and practice

Editors: T Neethling & H Hudson

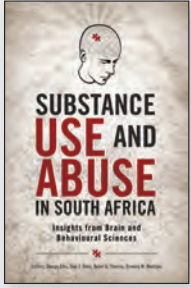

Some of the bloodiest conflicts occur on the African continent. An Afrocentric perspective is therefore a suitable starting point for research into the possible strategies for post-conflict peacebuilding. The authors of this book consider the problems around the concept of 'post-conflict' and the blurring of military and civilian roles, analysing the UN roles in the DRC and Sierra Leone, as well as the African Union Mission in Burundi. The main context of the book, however, is the South African Army's strategy for PCRD in Africa, which has been developed with the African Union's 2006 Post-Conflict, Reconstruction and Development Needs Assessment Guide in mind. This book emanates from this plan. It therefore also explores South Africa's policy imperatives to integrate development projects and peace missions, involving the military as well as civilian organisations.

Substance Use and Abuse in South Africa

Brain behaviour and other perspectives

Editors: G Ellis, D Stein, E Meintjies & K Thomas

Substance abuse is an enormous social problem in South Africa, as elsewhere. It is one of the focus areas of the Brain-Behaviour Initiative (BBI) at the University of Cape Town, which relates neuroscience and behavioural science to social issues. This ground-breaking book, which presents some of the cutting-edge research of this unit, looks at the problem of substance abuse from multiple perspectives and particularly in the light of recent discoveries in brain and behavioural science, but also taking a public health view. Its focus ranges from brain imaging and dopaminergic neurocircuitry to policy and prevention. In South Africa in particular, tik (crystal meth, or methamphetamine) and alcohol are devastating society, aggravating poverty and crime, and contributing to child abuse and gender violence. Substance Use and Abuse is the first book to address the nature of this problem in an integrated way.

Youth Violence

Sources and solutions in South Africa

Editors: C Ward, A Dawes & A van der Merwe

This book thoroughly and carefully reviews the evidence for risk and protective factors that influence the likelihood of young people acting aggressively. Layers of understanding are built by viewing the problem from a multitude of perspectives, including the current situation in which South African youth are growing up, perspectives from developmental psychology, the influences of race, class and gender, and of the media. The book examines the evidence for effective interventions in the contexts of young people's lives – their homes, their schools, their leisure activities, with gangs, in the criminal justice system, in cities and neighbourhoods, and with sexual offenders. In doing so, thoughtful suggestions are made for keeping an evidence-based perspective while (necessarily) adapting interventions for developing world contexts, such as South Africa.

Failure of Decentralisation in South African Local Government, The Complexity and unanticipated consequences

A Siddle & T Koelble

Decentralised government is practised in many developing and transitional countries, including South Africa. The South African local government model has various instruments in place which, in theory, enable local government to achieve developmental objectives. Yet many South African municipalities are dysfunctional and incapable of performing their duties.

This book examines the design of the local government framework and its contributing role in the crisis based on research conducted at 37 municipalities around the country. It poses a number of questions about the future design for local government and suggests that a far simpler model which imposes less complex demands needs to be considered.

Public Works and Social Protection in Sub-Saharan Africa

Do public works work for the poor?

A McCord

This book critically explores the concept of the Public Works Programme (PWP) and interrogates its social protection performance in the context of chronic poverty. It reviews over 200 PWPs in eastern and southern Africa using original research drawn from extensive field analysis, interviews and survey work, and examines case studies of six international PWPs – in India, Argentina, Ireland, Ethiopia, Indonesia and the USA. The author explores the function and limitations of PWPs, and outlines major programme choice and design issues, drawing lessons from the international context, and challenging the assumptions underlying these policy preferences, thus opening the way for more informed and appropriate policy selection. The book makes a case for a reconsideration of the function of PWPs in the current social protection discourse, and argues that the current PWP approach may not look so attractive from the beneficiary perspective.

Trade Terms and Conditions

We would like to draw your attention to the following terms and conditions for the return of stock to Juta and Company, and request that you familiarise yourself with our policies and procedures in order to expedite your approval requests timeously and with a minimum of administration. A failure to adhere to these terms and conditions may delay the processing of customer credits or result in an authorisation request being rejected.

Trade Returns

Only written applications for permission to return and exchange publications will be accepted. Please address requests to return and returns queries to:

Returns Administrator

Fax: 021 659 2755
e-mail: returns@juta.co.za

Application for return must be accompanied by:

- The relevant invoice and account number(s).
- Titles, ISBNs and quantities that you wish to return.
- Reasons for the return.
- In the case of old-edition returns where these have been invited by Juta, a copy of the replacement order placed with our Customer Services Department for an equivalent number of copies of the new edition. Permission to return shall not be granted without such an order in these instances.

Please note:

- The maximum percentage allowed for returns is based on the invoice value or total annual purchases, depending on the respective agreement in place with the Trader concerned. Please consult the Trade Returns Administrator to confirm this if in doubt.
- Only applications to return local publications within 12 months of the invoice date will be considered. Requests for returns on imported stock must be lodged within 6 months of the Invoice date.

Successful/authorised applications

- Juta will send an official Returns Authorisation, and publications may only be returned once this document has been received.
- A copy of the Returns Authorisation must accompany all your returns.
- Juta will only accept goods in a resalable condition. Product containing price stickers and other markings will not be accepted.
 - On receipt by Juta, goods are evaluated by the Returns Administrator.
 - Discrepancies are further evaluated by the Customer Services Administrator and Stock Administrator prior to contacting the customer.
 - Customer complaints are referred to the Warehouse Manager for evaluation.
 - Unresolved complaints are referred to the Divisional Sales Manager.
- Returns authorisations are only valid for a period of 30 days from date of issue to the Trader by the Returns Administrator.

Unsuccessful returns applications

- In the event of applications for the return of stock being denied, a Juta representative will inform traders of the reasons for this in writing.

Unauthorised returns

- Goods must be collected from the Juta warehouse within 7 days of being notified of an unauthorised return. Unauthorised returns which remain on our premises after 7 days will be returned to the sender and the cost of this charged to the customer's account.

Reporting of quality and quantity discrepancies

- All discrepancies should be logged with our Customer Services Department either via e-mail to: cserv@juta.co.za, Fax: +27 659 2360 or Tel: +27 659 2300 within 7 days of receipt of goods. Imperfect or mis-bound publications, or stock damaged in transit will be credited once the unsaleable publications have been collected and received at our Warehouse.
- Replacement goods will be invoiced in full.

Please note:

- In instances where the return is not as a result of an error on Juta's part, the cost of carriage will be for the customer's account. Should the return be due to an error on Juta's part, we will arrange collection at our expense, with a carrier nominated by us.
- Returns on sale or discounted priced titles will not be accepted.
- Pocket Statute titles may not be returned, except in instances where these have been damaged in transit.
