Written culture in a colonial context (WebPDF)

About this Publication:

There is very little in the modern literature on the history of written culture that describes the specific practices related to writing that were anchored in colonial contexts. It was not just ships, soldiers, missionaries and settlers that drove the process of European expansion from the 16th to the 19th centuries. The circulation of images, manuscripts and books between different continents played a key role too. The Portuguese Estado da India, the Spanish Carrera de Indias, the Dutch, English and French East-Indian Companies, as well as the Company of Jesus, all fixed and inscribed the details of their travels in several types of document (letters, logs, diaries, histories, etc.). They also regulated, with different degrees of efficiency, the circulation of this material and the content received (through the construction of archives, censorship, control of publications, secrecy, etc.). In addition, the introduction and appropriation of writing into societies without alphabets was a major factor in changing the very function and meaning of written culture. This book explores the extent to which the types of written information that resulted during colonial expansion shaped the numerous and complex processes of cultural exchange from the 16th century onwards in Africa and the Americas.

The electronic version of Written Culture: Sources and Solutions in Africa is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution - Non-Commercial - No Derivative Works 3.0 South Africa License.

Contents Include:

1. Rock art, scripts and proto-scripts in Africa: the Libyco-Berber example. J.-L. Le Quellec (CNRS, France)
2. From pictures to letters: the early steps in the Mexican tlachuilo's alphabetisation process during the 16th century. P. Johansson (Universidad Autonoma de México)
3. Edmond R. Smith’s writing lesson: archive and representation in 19th-century Auracania. A. Menard (Universidad de Chile)
4. Missionary knowledge in context: geographical knowledge of Ethiopia in dialogue during the 16th and 17th centuries. H.
6. Towards an archaeology of globalisation: readings and writings of Tommaso Campanella on a theological-political empire between the Old and the New worlds (16th-17th centuries). F. Luduena Romandini (Universidad de Buenos Aires, Argentina)

7. Charlevoix and the American savage: the 18th-century traveller as moralist. D.J. Culpin (University of St-Andrews, Scotland)

8. Written culture and the Cape Khoikhoi: from travel writing to Kolb’s ‘Full Description’. N. Penn (University of Cape Town, South Africa)

9. ‘Nothing new under the sun’: anatomy of a literary-historical polemic in colonial Cape Town, circa 1880-1910. P. Merrington (University of Western Cape, South Africa)

10. Mapuche-Tehuelche Spanish writing and Argentinian-Chilean expansion during the 19th century. J. Vezub (CONICET, Argentina)

11. To my Dear Minister: official letters of African Wesleyan evangelists in the late 19th-century Transvaal. L. Kriel (University of Pretoria, South Africa)

12. Literacy and Land at the Bay of Natal: documents and practices across spaces and social economies. M. Prinsloo (University of Cape Town, South Africa)

13. The ‘painting’ of black history: the Afro-Cuban Codex of Jose Antonio Aponte (Havana, Cuba, 1812). J. Pavez Ojeda (Universidad Católica del Norte, Chile)

14. On not spreading the Word: Ministers of religion and written culture at the Cape of Good Hope in the 18th century. G. Groenewald (University of Johannesburg, South Africa)

15. Occurrences and eclipses of the myth of Ulysses in Latin American culture. J. Burucua (Universidad de San Martin, Argentina)

Of Interest and Benefit to:

Students and academics in history, social studies of Africa and the Americas, and studies in literature.